Marcus Garvey in the following is a very nice translation, from the page "Garvey's Other Legacy", of the chapter on Marcus Garvey by Otto Rothermel: from the leader on the European race, the known "editor" of the BlackMan, dated 2.12.1912 (!) through the early years in Jamaica, to his last years in New York. The effect is good, for each decade is covered, showing a very lively and envious side of Garvey: the speaker of the lecture, the political orator, the father, the businessman, the planner, the journalist, the leader of the UNIA, the organizer of the workers, the preacher, the teacher of humanism and the cosmopolitan, the apostle and the hero of black humanity - a legend of the civil rights movement, a spiritual representative of a new race of freedom fighters, a pioneer of African return to Africa and his self-determination, an activist for the liberation of the victims of the African Diaspora, a torch bearer of humanism in the world and in black people, a 82157476af
